* In 1776, a temporary Constitution was framed, to continue during the war with Great-Britain, under which Constitution, Meshech Weare was annually elected President. This was the first Constitution formed in any of the Colonies after the Revolution commenced.

† On the 31st of October, 1783, the new civil Constitution of New-Hampshire went into operation, and continued, without alteration, until 1792. Meshech Weare was the first President.

‡ In 1792, the Constitution was revised by a convention of Delegates, who assembled at Concord. The title of President for the Chief Magistrate was abrogated, and that of Governor substituted.

SKETCHES OF THE CHIEF MAGISTRATES OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

JOHN CUTT.

John Cutt, the first Provincial Chief Magistrate of New-Hampshire, came from Wales to this country before the year 1646, and fixed his residence at Portsmouth. His business was that of a merchant, in which he acquired a considerable estate. He was married in 1662, to Hannah Star, and had five children, two of whom were sons. A second wife, Ursula, whom he married after 1674, was killed by the Indians. He was appointed President of New-Hampshire in 1679, and entered upon the duties of his office early in 1680, and died 27 March, 1681.

RICHARD WALDRON.

Richard Waldron, with a brother William, came to this country from Somersetshire, England, about 1640, and settled at Dover, where he soon became one of the principal men of the settlement. A letter from Rev. John Walrond, of Ottery, Eng. to Rev. William Waldron, of Boston, dated in 1726, supposes Richard to be descended from Richard Walerand, known in English history,* to whom lands in Devonshire were granted by the Crown about A. D. 1130. President, or Major Waldron, by which title he was generally known, represented Dover in the General Court of Massachusetts 22 years, and was speaker of the house in 1666, 1667, 1668, 1673 part of 1674, and in 1679. He succeeded Pres. Cutt in 1681, and the next year was succeeded by Cranfield. He was killed by the Indians in their attack on Dover, June, 1689, at the age of about 80. He left one son Richard, born in 1650, whose descendants to the present day have been employed in public life.

* See Rapin's Hist. England.

EDWARD CRANFIELD.

Edward Cranfield was appointed by royal commission, Lieutenant Governor of New-Hampshire, 9 May, 1682. He was of the family of Lord Monteagle, who was instrumental of discovering the Popish plot in the reign of James I. His government in New-Hampshire was arbitrary and oppressive in a high degree, but fortunate for the people it was short, lasting only about three years. Let our youth read this portion of our history in the first volume of Belknap. After Cranfield's departure from N. H., he resided sometime in Barbadoes. In the reign of William III., he procured a ship of war at his own expense, it is said, and presented it to the crown. He died about the beginning of the last century, and was buried in the Cathedral church at Bath, England.

JOSEPH DUDLEY.

Joseph Dudley was the eldest son by a second marriage of Gov. Thomas Dudley of Massachusetts, on whom his successor, Gov. Belcher, wrote the following epitaph.

" Here lies Thomas Dudley, that trusty old stud ;
" A bargain's a bargain and must be made good."

Joseph was born at Roxbury, 23 Sept. 1647, and graduated at Harvard college in 1665. He was elected an Assistant of Massachusetts colony in 1676, and remained in that office until 1686, when he was appointed President of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire. His authority in both places ceased on the arrival of Sir Edmund Andros, 20 Dec. 1686. On the accession of Queen Anne, he was appointed Governor of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire. He arrived at Boston from England, 11 June, 1702, and continued in the government of both provinces till Nov. 1715. He died at Roxbury, 2 April, 1720, æ 72 His family was numerous and respectable. Paul Dudley, F.R.S.

his third son, was founder of the annual Dudleian lecture at Harvard college.

EDMUND ANDROS.

Edmund Andros was appointed by James II., governor of the whole of New-England, in 1686, and arrived at Boston, 29 Dec. that year. His administration was of the most oppressive and tyrannical character, and verged far towards despotism. After suffering the impositions of his arbitrary measures more than two years, the people in and around Boston, on the 18 April, 1689, took up arms, and seized the governor, and about 50 other obnoxious persons, and confined them. Andros was sent to England for trial, and though guilty in public estimation, escaped without public censure. In 1692, he was appointed governor of Virginia. It is stated that he died at an advanced age in London, in Feb. 1714.

JOHN USHER.

After the new Charter of Massachusetts was granted in 1691, the province of New-Hampshire continued a separate government until the Revolution, when the regal government was entirely abrogated. John Usher, a native of Boston, was appointed lieutenant governor of New-Hampshire in 1692. He was son of Hezekiah Usher, a bookseller, of Boston, and was born 27 April, 1648, and was educated a stationer. He remained in office about five years, and was succeeded by William Partridge. He was again appointed in 1702 under Gov. Dudley, and remained in office until 1715. He afterwards removed to Medford, where he died 5 Sept. 1726, æ 78.

WILLIAM PARTRIDGE.

William Partridge was appointed lieutenant governor of New-Hampshire about the year 1697, and sustained the office but little more than one year. He removed to Newbury about the year 1703, and there spent the rest of his days in a "mercantile department, and in the business of his profession." He died 3 Jan. 1729, in the 75th year of his age. Richard Partridge, his son, was an agent for the province in England, and lived in London. Mary, one of his daughters, was the wife of Gov. Belcher, and died in 1736, æ 51.

SAMUEL ALLEN.

Samuel Allen, the purchaser of Mason's claim, was appointed governor of New-Hampshire in 1698, and exercised the functions of office about one year. The history of his administration is given by Dr. Belknap. He issued an order 31 Jan. 1699, to the sheriff to make "strict search for finding out all books, records, scripts, minuments, and other writings belonging unto the inhabitants of the province," which had been formerly in the custody of William Vaughan. Gov. Allen died 4 May, 1705.

RICHARD, EARL OF BELLAMONT.

The Earl of Bellamont, whose name, I suppose, was Richard Coote, was appointed governor of New-York, Massachusetts and New-Hampshire in May, 1695, but did not arrive at New-York until May, 1698. He arrived at Boston, 26 May, 1699, and was received with the greatest respect, being the first nobleman who had been placed at the head of any of the New-England governments. He rendered himself very acceptable to the people, by his condescension and courteous deportment on all occasions. He was particularly active in securing the pirates, which had for some time infested our shores, and it was during his administration that the noted Captain Kidd was seized and sent to England for trial. The Earl's administration was short, as his death occurred at New-York, 5 March, 1701.

CHURCHES,

AND MINISTERS OF THE GOSPEL, OF DIFFERENT DENOMINATIONS.

I. CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES.

The Congregationalists are the most numerous denomination of christians in New-Hampshire. The oldest church takes its date from the year 1638. From that time to the 1 November, 1827, there had been regularly inducted into office over the different churches, as many as 381 ministers, of whom 326 were educated at the colleges in this country, and 55 were educated at foreign universities, or received their education from clergymen. Of the number educated at the colleges in the United States, 177 were graduated at Harvard University, 77 at Dartmouth, 26 at Yale, 17 at Brown, 11 at Middlebury, 7 at Nassau, in New-Jersey, 7 at Williams, 3 at Bowdoin, and 1 at Union. Nearly 90 had been ordained before their settlement in this State, or received installation after being dismissed from their first charge in N. H. About 110 have died in this State, while sustaining the ministerial office.

Those within brackets are without pastoral charge. Those having a † are life members of the American Education Society; those having ‖ are life members of the American Bible Society; those with a ‡ are members of the American Tract Society. Those in italicks have been employed a portion of time the past year by the N. H. Missionary Society.

JUDICIARY OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Judicial power of the United States is vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as Congress, from time to time, may establish. The present judicial establishment of the United States, consists of a Supreme Court, of twenty-eight District Courts, and seven Circuit Courts, which are thus organized; the Supreme Court is composed of one Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, who hold a Court in the City of Washington annually; besides which, each of these Justices attends in a certain Circuit, comprising two or more districts, appropriated to each, and, together with the Judge of the District, compose a Circuit Court, which is holden in each District of the Circuit. The District Courts are held, respectively, by the District Judge alone. Appeals are allowed from the District to the Circuit Courts, and from the Circuit to the Supreme Court: and, in some cases, where the inconvenience of attending the Court by a justice of the Supreme Court is very great, the District Courts are invested with Circuit Court powers.
